LIBERTERREAN DEADLINE IS: Monday, July 15, 1985

NOTICE:

I plan to cease publishing the LIBERTERREAN. We've finished 43 Diplomacy games, and a couple dozen other multi-player games over the past 13 years or so. I've made a lot of good friends through this eise, one of which has been with me since before my first issue -- Carl Olson. Fred Phrogus and Charlie Coltle have been friends for most of the LIB's life. Many more of you have been with us for several years. I'll miss not getting letters from you, so even after I'm no longer publishing, I hope you'll write from time to time.

I don't consider the LIB my property and so I will not kill it if someone else wants to continue publishing it, either as a separate issue, or a sub-issue. I invite any proposals a publisher or potential publisher might have.

I'll finish all the Diplomacy games, or find someone for them to finish. I don't want to start the new game which filled this issue. And I hope some publisher will take up the Joust. It's not necessary that the West Coast Joust be carried in a West Coast time if some other one wants to carry it. The AD game and the Libourse will continue until I've finished with the Diplomacy games. I invite anyone willing to adopt these poor, orphan games (that is, if you don't want to adopt the whole LIB), to contact me asap.

Thanks to all of you for making my publishing experience as enjoyable as it has been.

EDITORIAL:

India has a Marxist govt. And the prime minister, Rajiv Gaedi just returned from Moscow after signing a treaty with the Russians. Why doesn't Reagan send some of his "contrae" to India? Probably because Nicaragua is just about his size -- not too much bigger than Grenada!

JOUST

We're still stuck at 6 players representing the following aines: LIB, Concerl of Europe, Nut N.Y., Eccelsior, Magnus, and Xeno. Isn't there one more champion on the west coast, out of 25+ aines? The players and pebbles are getting impatient!

End Game Statement:

Please don't glee away Sev. I worked so hard to get it. I should have had 19 centers, not 18. IRight. Correction made to the score. -- JBI

I wish to thank Fred for being such a good partner. I'm sorry about the misunderstanding which ended the partnership. A special award should go to Kevin for being able to survive for so long. This will be my last game for awhile (I think I could do stonchys) and I feel good about the way it came out. Thanks to all of you for the good game.

-- Mike Moyer

ARMORED BARBARISM 1985:

I haven't heard from Trilkovic for a couple of deadlines, and he's let his subscription expire. So in case he's disappeared, someone may offer to take the position as a stoedhy. If Merk drops it, it will be yours!

COA: Robert Whiting, Box 33735, GIT, Atlanta, GA 30332. Robert also requests my spreadsheet results from the following facts: Initial GR = 60%; Initial income = 100 PP. Spending: 100 PP on movement and attack; 10 PP on GR increase; 10 PP on income increase (I assumed a bank account sufficient to spend the extra 20 PP). Results: GR = 59%, income = 100 PP. The spreadsheet cells produce the following results (consult the algorithms published previously): K = -0.01; L = 5.9; M = 100; N = 0.00; O = -0.01; P = -0.01; Q = 38.89; R = -0.01; S = 0.83; T = -0.01.

MOSCOW (Praeda): The Soviet Union today announced that the Soviet Union and Sweden will accept the World Court ruling as long as at least one Swedish judge is present.

The Hague, Netherlands: The World Court just handed down its decision rejecting Sweden's petition for extradition against Haiti. The decision was handed down before an audience which included 73 Swedish judges in town for a seminar in International Law.

MOSCOW/KATO: Don't make me laugh.

TEHRAN: Soviet forces patrolling the Iranian border were ordered today to allow the British to use Iranian roads as needed.

STOCKHOLM/PORT-an PRINCE: Try getting rid of the dead beats.

CAP-HAITIEN: High-rolling, and big spending Swedes here virtually taken over all the tourist facilities in this town. Americans coming down expecting a nice peaceful week in the sun, are finding that both the hotel rooms and all three of the cafe tables are always taken up by the large crowd of Swedish tourists. The local chamber of commerce reports its tourist revenues are up by 1000%!

LONDON TIMES: The Queen is dead... Long live the King!

Her Majesty, despite our prayers, has at last succumbed to the double-phnomia which she contracted the last hard winter, at the age of 82. An emergency session of Parliament has approved the Diaine Right succession of her son, Edward VII. (The one notable absentee was the House of Commons peer S. Holmes, reported to have been pre-occupied with stumbling over "things" in the dark -- once again not heeding the advice of his physician, one J. Watson, MD -- and cramming God-knows-what in that mearschaum of his.) Our correspondent-in-residence was able to obtain the following quota from His Majesty:

"Mummy was a tough old bird. One could say she was, to use the vernacular, a 'wicked witch'. One could also say she was a cornerstone of stability in Western Europe. One could also say 'I'aa got a quid down on horse #5 in the 5th at Ascot', but who'd listen? At least I got to kick that pompons ass, Lyons-Harta, back to Castle Bewilderd!" (our correspondent has resigned his post. Your gantaal editor is considering some.)

EDWARD

VII)Whoaaaar-in-hell-is-mismanaging-Franca-this-season: Mums was too lenient with you. Your total disregard for her concern over the welfare of Europe, which only hastened her physical deterioration, shall be avenged.

LON)BER: What stench? Oamark smells fine!

ENG)TUR: We offer nothing for a piece of Austria. We are not interested in distressed property. Slnlord! Ask the Italian.

BLORE)JUDGE WARGRAVE: I was merely following my orders; "If it means, shoot it. If it's bigger than you are, get someone else to shoot it for you."

F-15 STRIKE EAGLE

(Microprose Software $34.95)

F-15 Strike Eagle is a simulation putting you in command of a modern jet fighter-bomber. At your fingers are medium and short range missiles, guns and bombs. Ahead of you are SAMs, enemy fighters, airfields, and targets. The mission is to penetrate the enemy defenses and bomb your primary target(s). Are you good enough?

This is a change for me. Usually I play ground combat simulations, but I never turn away a challenge. And this game is a challenge, for pilots of all ages. The game disk includes seven missions to fly, from Libya to Hanoi. One to four players may participate. There are also four levels of difficulty, and they are difficult. Realism plays a big part in this game. Before you can begin a mission, you must authenticate yourself with a code found in the book. More realism exists in the game as your plane is equipped with everything from HUD (Heads up Display, showing instrument read-outs on the windscreen) to flares to ECM (Electronic Counter Measures to defeat enemy weapons). You look out from the cockpit over the landscape as you fly, but your desk board includes three radars, as well as a tactical map.

This game is very playable, and flexible in that no mission is exactly the same as any other. The graphics are very detailed, along with power/weight curves and thrust output graphs included in the manual, and even diagrams of some simple evasive actions. The aircraft is so maneuverable you can perform almost any type of maneuver. I rate this game highly, for the true pilot or just for someone who wants to enjoy the thrill of flying.

—Aaron Ness

BREAKTHROUGH IN THE ARDENNES ($40, SSI) is a smoothly executed simulation of the last major battle on the Western Front during WW2. This is a "classic" simulation, war-gamed by dozens of paper board gamers over the years. The computer version permits both solitary and two-player enjoyment. Each turn is a day of game time. Three scenarios include the first and last 7 days, as well as the whole 12 days.

The map scrolls over several screens containing a 32 by 31 hex grid each of which "represents an area of about two miles". Parts of Germany, France, Belgium and Luxembourg are included. Terrain includes clear rough, forest, town, river and road. The depiction of roads is unusual — they are indicated by white hexsides. Bridges are a very important terrain feature, but they are indicated on the screen only by the white hexside of a road. When the bridge is destroyed, it must be rebuilt by the player desiring to use it. Players must refer to a plastic-coated play-aid map to see bridge sites which may be rebuilt. Only Engineer units may rebuild bridges for the Germans.

Maneuver elements include battalions, regiments and divisions. Units belonging to the same formations may be combined or broken down into separate units. While there are only 12 turns, each turn has 12 phases. The program performs very quickly, and players are offered the option to save a game in progress at several points during a turn.

Tracing supply lines to a friendly edge of the map is crucial to success in the game. Air points are available for ground attack and interdiction roles. Artillery and replacement points may be added to ground units. Units may enter a "Travel" mode for more rapid movement along roads. Units may also fortify positions. Combat is plotted with the option to advance into a vacated enemy hex. Weather may affect the movement of units.

The 5 levels of victory conditions are based upon the possession of towns on the map. The 7 pages of documentation include a historical commentary, notes on strategy and tactics, an Order of Battle Chart, and some examples of play. A novice to the hobby of playing historical simulations might enjoy this one. For those of intermediate or expert skill, this game provides subtle challenges.

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO LIBERTERREAN ARE $5/9 ISSUES. DEADLINES ARE EVERY THREE WEEKS. LIBERTERREAN IS A GAME-ZINE FOR PLAYERS OF DIPLOMACY, ARMORED BARBARISM, LIBOURSE & OTHER MULTI-PLAYER GAMES. ALL PLAYERS MUST MAINTAIN A SUBSCRIPTION. EACH SUBBER MAY USE UP TO 300 WORDS PER ISSUE FOR LETTERS, PRESS, ADVERTIZEMENTS, & ETC.
